

TEXTBOOK OTIS: TOOLS OF THE TRADE

“Tit for tat, butter for fat, if you kick my dog, I’ll kick your cat.” Nick Zeki, Student 1987.

Textbook Otis rings the long-dormant bell of the Collingwood Technical College (1912-1987) for an enlivened curriculum of food, art, music and wine. Amongst a belligerent cohort, a strict curriculum of 5 periods will be enjoyed on campus. Those attending the event will taste the labour of tested trades across a meal riddled with enjoyment, employment and education.

'POP REG'S ONION SANDWICH' RECIPE – A.SHAW

This recipe, or idea really, is my pop Reg's. He has a strong conviction; he knows what he likes and sticks to it. And as for being an authority on taste, I can say that the man hasn't had a glass of water in seventy years, "why would you when you can have a Bickford's bitter lemon cordial?!"

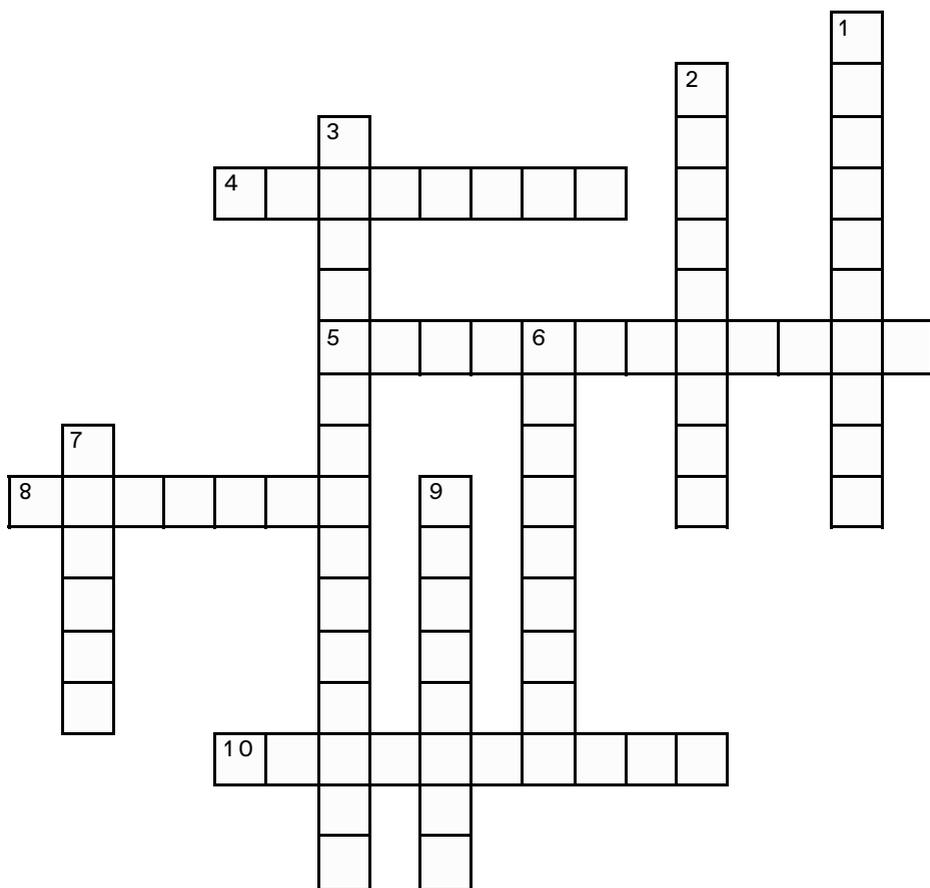

Pop would have a simple workers lunch: white bread, brown onion, yellow margarine. Like the roughie paying forty-to-one, Pop can pick a winner, and this pairing of tang and fat is something worth the sour breath afterwards.

You can get bougie here and make a quick pickle of Roscoff onion and firm cucumber (pass on the sugar and use a brine of red wine vinegar spiked with whole black peppercorns and maybe fennel seeds) leave to soak for twenty minutes. The same goes for the bread - swap in sourdough for the plush white stuff. A sharp crumbly cheese does a lot to soften the blow, as does a punchy aioli, or simply slather the bread with salted butter.

But let me say, for a kitchen sink supper, a gherkin sliced length ways on a piece of garlic rubbed and heavily buttered toast is just as much a treat, with all the integrity and pleasure of Pop's original sanga.

NONNA PINA'S FRITTATA – R.CERRITELLI

4-5 Eggs
1 Zucchini (sliced)
1 - 2 Garlic cloves
Handful of Asparagus spears (chopped or left whole)
Generous amount of Extra Virgin Olive oil
Buffalo Mozzarella
Parmigiano-Reggiano
(parmesan) cheese
Basil
Salt & Pepper

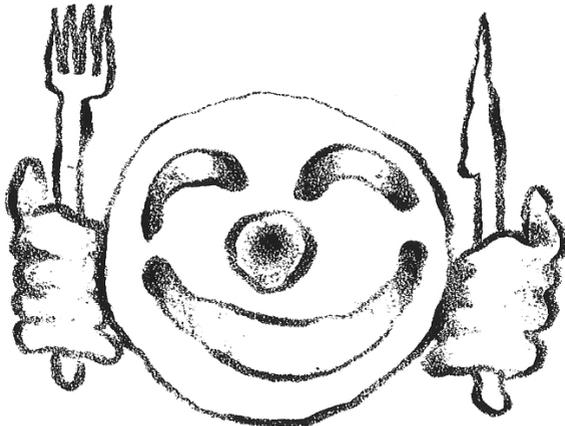

Preheat grill on high.
Meanwhile heat olive oil in a frypan and add garlic. After about uno minute add the asparagus and the zucchini to the pan and sauté for 3-4 minutes.

In a mixing bowl beat the eggs with a antique silver fork, add handfuls of parmigiano and a sprinkle of salt and pepper. Once mixed, pour the egg mixture into the frypan, tear pieces of buffalo mozzarella and nonchalantly scatter over the frittata.

Fry until the base is cooked then place under the grill until golden marone.

Garnish with basilico and a generous amount of olive oil and it's ready to eat!

Buon appetito!

SPOONERISMS – A.ROSS

Spoonerisms usually occur within Discourses that may contain word couplets which are often used and thus, when “spoonerised”, can be humorous.

A syllable swap changes it to “Can Belto”. this becomes a cute joke for operatic sopranos.

They are usually funny because they are an “in joke” occurring within specific Discourses eg. there is a cafe/restaurant which has just opened locally. It was a bit of a cockroach farm prior to the new owners re-painting and re-vamping it. Its name is “Myrtle House” which, if spoonerised, becomes “Hurtle Mouse”; very appropriate for its clean, new look.

The listener has to be habitualised to the word/ syllable couplet before it becomes funny to hear it spoonerised. There are many half Spoonerisms for band names ie. The Rolling Stones–The Strolling Bones, Mondo Rock–Munro Duck, Talking Heads–Hawking Teds, Paul Delly and the Cots.
